CONGRESSIONAL RESUME.

The committees on appropriations of each house are authorized to sit at the capital during the recess of congress, and consider what reform can be made in the civil service. It was agreed in the capital during the recess of congress, and the civil service. It was agreed in the senate that the tariff bill go over to the next session, the house having non-concurred in the senate amendments. The international difficulty arbitration scheme passed the senate. The bill to investigate and correct Utah affairs was laid on the table, after a lively discussion of the subject of Mormonism. Some other business intervened, and the Utah bill was resumed, and several amendments were submitted and agreed to, and the bill, as amended, passed.

The political disabilities of John Forsyth and J. T. Pugh, of Alabama, were removed without dissent. The senate authorized the coinage of a twenty-cent silver-piece at the mints of the United States. Speaker Carpenter, in replying to a vote of thanks tendered. ments were submitted and agreed to, in replying to a vote of thanks tendered him by the senate, said that the presiding officer should not be a senstor, as the position was so nearly a judicial one; for as a senstor be must, more or the house hardly one fourth of the members were present at its opening at ten o'clock yesterday morning. The report of the committee on the river and harber appropriation bill was agreed to. It appropriates about half a million more than the one passed at the previous ression. Straw blds in the postoffice deparagent were discussed, and it was a matter of wonder to some of the representatives that congress was thwarted in its attempts to correct such evils. The last act of the house was the removal of the political disabilities of James T. Pugh, of Alabama, and the on of the forty-third congress
